What is Vin Doux Naturel?

- Yeast action is halted before any fermentation begins and is halted by the addition of alcohol.
- The result is really a blend of wine, unfermented grape juice and added grape spirit.
- The sweetness comes from the unfermented sugar.

What is the difference between Fortified and Non-Fortified Wines?

- Fortified wines all involve the addition of grape spirits to still wine either before or during fermentation to either prevent or to stop fermentation.
- Those grape sugars not converted to alcohol by the action of yeast provide the sweetness.
- The added spirit often results in higher alcohol levels.
- Fortified wines are often referred to "mutage."
- Fortified wines include Port, Sherry, Marsala, Madeira and Vin Doux Naturel.
- Un-fortified wines are wines that have a high sugar concentration and achieve this by dehydration; a reduction in grape water content, thereby increasing the ratio of sugar to water, thus producing very sweet berries. Therefore the sweetness comes from grape dehydration.
- Examples of un-fortified wines include Sauternes, Vouvray (sweet), Monbazillac, Eiswein, Beerenauslese, Moscato D'Asti, Vin Santo.
- Pineau de Charente, because it's made with cognac instead of a neutral alcoholic spirit, is not classified as a Vin Doux Naturel but rather as a Vin de Liqueur.

VINEYARD NOTES

- Roussillon is the birthplace of vin doux naturel method by Arnaud de Villeneuve.
- In the 13th century, through his discovery that the addition of spirit to the must halted fermentation, he won a patent from the King of Majorca, who then ruled Roussillon.
- Arnaud's method of mutage remains essentially unchanged.
